Marx on Living Culture, Cities, and Forms of Cultural Life, even Daily Analysis

By Karl Marx (1968, New York University, Ioha)

I. Living Culture – that Real Living Culture

Marx, and Engels are here, we are really having a great life – just working on the table and commenting on our idea of a phone – like a call we make and check later which I call philosophical notation.

II. Feverish and Delirious, But Happy

In fact I keep writing, and reacting to Engels, I am also just happy with life – I even drink and smoke a lot. I am going to the center for health and dismissive of the diagnosis that argues I have a jolt in the leg causing jolts all around.

Doctors are specific and exact, anything like that is happiness. I instead have my own conceptual analysis after seven months of visiting doctors and cohorts of the bourgeois class, I argue it is delirium and feverish symptoms – something like a surreal quality to the day. I tell Jewish people this is the key to good health.

III. Monarchism and Fun

The monarchs in England and the Spanish monarch are busy having fun all day discussing sex with the Prophet told to be there in the 21st century. They keep wanting to have sex with him, and it is the Spanish monarch who talks about this exciting news that she is about this as well.

IV. Cities and Taxis in Spain's Madrid

I went by a taxi in Madrid, it was all so brilliant, this Spanish city famous for its hotels and Graeco-Roman architectural council forms – I am drifting past it, and felt the wind in my beard and head hair, and I even sensed the sleep in the night, I was calling this happiness. This Engels argues is how the bourgeoisie lives, always in taxis, which we cannot afford every day, only once in a week, usually we also travel by bus, that unpaid labour of transport that makes us all about buses and work life. I mean bus is a harsh fate for us, who cannot afford more than middle class wages.

V. Hospitals, Clinics and Physicians – how I am mis-diagnosed each day and how I long for a perfect doctor

And so in fact jolts is what I call common news, when there is no such thing. I long for a doctor who knows his basics, and can apply it. I am busy charting London for all the doctors knowing they are lackeys of the bourgeoisie.

Part II – A Long Manuscript on Culture and Living Culture – which then concludes a 40 page book for New York University to keep pristine

In fact I am wandering through the German countryside and other such visits Marx keeps arguing for, he even visits the Parthenon in Greece, and the working culture of peasants in France, and is just talking about – a number of living cultural experiences, including that of plantations in Brazil and such expeditions – all of which becomes in one edit the following Table of Contents –

I. The Long Argument of in fact History and Historical Materialism as

Living Culture – Socialisation of History as I would call it or Social History as Hobsbawm calls it

II. Wonderful experiences, like a bus in New York to a Southern town in Connecticut

III. All of these are Marx’s singular travelling life

IV. A Quote by David Harvey to conclude –

Perhaps all this Marxist writing on journeys and travels then means what I felt when I was in Madrid recently – just a journey of happiness – Marx argues we are all happy, because we can travel – now fever and delirium that Jewish people are presently going through with Sirohi then is happiness in Marx – of journeying into wildernesses and walking trails in forests – how today is about such of Heidegger's trecking – we are glad to be free of illnesses, these are just trifles feel free.
